

ABSTRACT

A probe for protein-protein interaction analysis suitable for analyzing protein-protein interactions of various proteins with high accuracy and in a simple manner and a method for analyzing interaction of two proteins by using the probe. With the probe, protein splicing is caused by protein-protein interaction, and a physicochemically or biochemically detectable protein is regenerated.